

NOTES ON CONTRIBUTORS

Viviana ANDREESCU, PhD, is an associate professor in the Department of Criminal Justice at the University of Louisville, USA. Her scholarly research includes studies focusing on social justice issues related to social minorities, violent crime, fear of crime, and immigration and crime in a national and international context. Contact: viviana.andrescu@louisville.edu.

Carmen BODIU is professor of Romanian language and literature and Director of the Continuous Teacher Training Center in Bihor County. Currently she is preparing a PhD thesis about the scientific and didactic activity of the literary historian Lucian Drimba. Contact: carmen.bodiu@yahoo.com.

Panagiotis CHASAPOPOULOS completed a joint Ph.D. in the field of Applied Economics at Antwerp Centre of Evolutionary Demography (ACED) of the Faculty of Applied Economics at the University of Antwerp in Belgium and at the Tilburg School of Economics and Management (TiSEM) of Tilburg University in the Netherlands in 2018. He has conducted original research on politics and socio-economics of immigration, given conference presentations in both Europe and the United States and currently works in applied research and analysis at a digital company in Amsterdam, Netherlands. Contact: haspanos@hotmail.com.

Arianna Montero COLBERT is an American Sociological Association Undergraduate Honors Fellow and an alumni of Davidson College, where she won the 2019 Algernon Sydney Sullivan award. Ms. Montero-Colbert majored in Sociology. Her publications have considered the role of climate change in migration and best practices in sociological learning. Ms. Montero-Colbert has presented her original independent research at conferences throughout the United States. Her thesis bridged frameworks of system avoidance and total institutions. Ms. Montero-Colbert's primary research interests include stratification and organizational studies, justice systems, and migration.

Natalie Delia DECKARD is an Assistant Professor of Criminology at the University of Windsor. Dr. Deckard's scholarship investigates the ways in which exclusion is constructed in neoliberal contexts. Given the convergence of criminal and migration law, she draws on and extends theory in Critical Criminology, Migration, and Political Sociology to make sense of the lived realities of marginalized groups at the global level. Dr. Deckard has worked to illuminate this area of enquiry through work in a variety of cases, including women imprisoned in Paraguay, Latinx migrants victimized in the US, Puerto Rican nationalists repressed on the island and the mainland, and Nigerian separatists narrated as terrorists. Dr. Deckard is a member of both the Canadian and American Sociological Associations, and she sits on the Board of the John Howard Society. Contact: natalie.deliadeckard@uwindsor.ca.

Valon JUNUZI is senior officer within Ministry of European Integration in Prishtina, Kosovo. He graduated Political Science at the University of Prishtina and a master on Global Political Economy at the University of Sussex, UK. Contact: va.junuzi@gmail.com.

Julia KANTEK is a PhD candidate at Western Sydney University and is currently completing her thesis on the subject area of Hungarian socio-cultural & structural transnationalism. She is a keen researcher in the field of Sociology with demonstrated experience in project development, with her research interests focused on of Migration, Identity and Transnationalism. Contact: j.kantek@westernsydney.edu.au.

Antonio De LAURI (PhD 2010, University of Milan-Bicocca, Italy) is Senior Researcher at the Chr. Michelsen Institute (Norway), where he coordinates the research group Humanitarianism, Aid and Borders (HAB). He is the Series Editor of Berghahn Books' Humanitarianism and Security and the Founding Editor-in-Chief of the journal Public Anthropologist. He is co-director of the Norwegian Centre for Humanitarian Studies and co-convenor of the Anthropology of Humanitarianism Network of the European Association of Social Anthropologists (EASA). De Lauri has conducted research in Afghanistan, Pakistan and Europe and has published extensively on issues related to war and post-war reconstruction, human rights, freedom, injustice and humanitarianism. Contact: antonio.delauri@cmi.no.

Helena ONNUDOTTIR is a social anthropologist and a lecturer in Anthropology at Western Sydney University. Helena has conducted fieldwork with Aboriginal people in western NSW and taken an anthropological foci to social and cultural transformations in Iceland following the GFC of 2008. She is the author of Religious Change and Indigenous Peoples: Global Discourses and Aboriginal Religions (2013) (with A. Possamai and B. Turner). Her most recent publications are 'Land, Nation and Tourist: Moral Reckoning in Post-GFC Iceland' (2017) Anthropological Journal of European Cultures, 26: 2, and 'From Resurrection and New Dawn to the Pirate Party: Political Party Names as Symbolizing Recent Transformations in the Political Field in Iceland' (2018), Politics, Religion & Ideology, 19: 4 (both with M. Hawkins).

Irina POP is a lecturer at Oradea University, Political Science and Communication Sciences Department. She is currently the leader of the EU funded project, COMXEN (www.comxen.ro). She has written and published over 15 specialized articles and she also wrote two books: Collective Branding. An Inquiring into Branding Nations (2011); The Philosophical Foundation of Images in the Communication Process. Identity and Image (2017). Contact: popirinamihaela@gmail.com.

Paloma ROBLES-LLANA has received her PhD from the Department of Applied Social Sciences of Hong Kong Polytechnic University and has worked as interpreter and intercultural mediator for the Chinese migrant community in Spain. Contact: palomaroblesllana@gmail.com.

Marius Ioan TĂTAR, PhD, is Lecturer in Political Science at the University of Oradea, Department of Political Science and Communication and former Postdoctoral Research Fellow at the University of Lausanne, Switzerland. His main research areas include political participation and democratization in Central and Eastern Europe. E-mail: mariustatar@yahoo.com.

Yasemin Tekgürler is the 2019 Georgia Justice Project (GJP) Impact Fellow. She recently graduated from Davidson College, Magna Cum Laude, double-majoring in Sociology and Studio Art. Ms. Tekgürler presented her original independent research at several conferences throughout the United States and won the DuBois Award for Excellence in Sociology. Her honors thesis involved a two year research project investigating tactics and strategies of police departments and immigration courts in the Southeastern United States in their work with immigrants and how they continue to reinforce the existing exclusionary systems. An immigrant from Istanbul, Turkey herself, Ms. Tekgürler's primary research interests include immigration justice, migration studies, criminal justice, and the construction of the criminal. Contact: yatekgurler@davidson.edu.

Piotr TEODOROWSKI is a Research Assistant at the School of Nursing and Midwifery at Robert Gordon University Aberdeen (UK). Before assuming his new post, he worked as a Researcher and Community Engagement Officer at Grampian Regional Equality Council in Aberdeen. His research interests are around migration and health inequalities. He has recently worked on the study exploring the impact of Brexit on mental health and wellbeing of EU citizens in Scotland. Contact: p.teodorowski@rgu.ac.uk.

Dan M. TSATAROS, JD, MBA, is an assistant professor in the School of Public and Environmental Affairs at Indiana University Northwest, USA. His teaching and research interests are in the areas of criminal law, criminal procedure, criminal evidence, juvenile justice, and ethics in criminal justice. Contact: dtsataro@iun.edu.

Irena C. VELJANOVA has completed her PhD with the School of Social Science and Psychology, WSU in 2011 in the field of Human Welfare Studies and Services. Her thesis titled Identity, Health and Health Capital: The Case of Macedonians in Australia, focused on the complex relationship between ethnocultural identity and health. She appears as an editor of the book Perception, Meaning and Identity published in 2010, a co-editor of the edited book Health, Agency and Wellbeing published in 2014, and a guest co-editor of the Special edition "Lifestyle Science: Self-healing, co-production and DIY", Health Sociology Review published in 2013. Together with Dr. Birch, she recently published her work on 'Raising awareness, improving victim safety: exploring the efficacy of proactive domestic and family violence prevention measures', in the 2018 Routledge International Handbook of Human Aggression: Current Issues and Perspectives co-edited by Ireland, Jane L., Birch, Philip, Ireland, Carol A. Contact: i.veljanova@westernsydney.edu.au.

Michelle Hale WILLIAMS is Chair of the Department of Government and Professor of Political Science at the University of West Florida. She teaches courses in world elections, parties and politics, democracy & democratization, radicalism and extremism in politics, race and ethnicity, international relations, data analytics and social science research methods. Her research interests include far right parties, nationalism and ethnic politics, political parties and party systems, political institutions, European politics, and scholarship of teaching and learning with emphasis on information literacy. Her books include The Multicultural Dilemma: Migration, Ethnic Politics, and State Intermediation (ed., 2013, Routledge) and The Impact of Radical Right-wing Parties in West European Democracies (2006, Palgrave). She has book chapters with Oxford University Press and Routledge presses. Her published work also appears in many scholarly journals including Party Politics, Ethnic and Racial Studies, Análise Social, Nationalism and Ethnic Politics, Journal of Contemporary European Studies, German Politics, PS: Political Science and Politics, and the Journal of Political Science Education. Contact: mwilliams@uwf.edu.